FEATURED SPEAKERS

Dennis Wagner, MPA

As the director of the Quality Improvement and Innovation Group at the Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) Dennis Wagner leads a team of committed individuals in developing and delivering innovative and collaborative initiatives to improve healthcare. Prior to his current role Mr. Wagner served as the co-director for the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Innovation's Partnership for Patients, and associate deputy director and then acting director of CMS' Office of Clinical Standards and Quality. He worked for 12 years at the Health Resources and Services Administration (HRSA), including a final stint as acting director of HRSA's Office of Health Information Technology and Quality. Mr. Wagner holds a Master of Public Administration degree from Montana State University.

Elisabeth Rosenthal, MD

Dr. Rosenthal joined Kaiser Health News in 2016 after 22 years as a correspondent at The New York Times, where she covered a variety of topics from healthcare to environment to reporter in the Beijing bureau. Her two-year-long New York Times series, "Paying Till it Hurts" (2013-14) won many prizes for both health reporting and its creative use of digital tools. She is the author of An American Sickness: How Healthcare became Big Business and How You Can Take it Back, published by Penguin Random House in April 2017. She is a graduate of Stanford University and Harvard Medical School and briefly practiced medicine in a New York City emergency department before changing her focus to journalism.

Marnie L. Doubek, MD, FAAP

Dr. Doubek began her medical career in September, 2000 after opening a private practice office providing quality primary care. She helped to build a successful, respected, family practice and became part of Atlantic Medical Group in 2013. In 2014, Dr. Doubek found herself on the patient side of things. Her 11-year-old son, Zachary, developed severe sepsis due to an aggressive infection in his femur. Zachary survived, but Dr. Doubek recognized the need to raise awareness and recognition of sepsis both in the medical community and in the general population. Dr. Doubek has recently joined the Sepsis Alliance Board of Directors and has been featured, with Zachary, in a series of sepsis awareness public service announcements.
